((Opening set up reserved for Six. Others welcome to join in later.))

Black. It billowed out of soot coated chimneys. It cloaked the sky so that even the sun could not burn through it. It hung over buildings and choked the alleyways, the streets, the souls of those who lived there.

"So, what do you think?"

From the top of the Tower, Negaduck swept his gesture over the squalor that was the Negaverse.

"Your home."

'All the light doesn't touch is your kingdom' and what not...

Six had followed him into the portal to the Negaverse, making sure to note its location for future purposes. So this was the place Two had told him about all those years ago and now he was seeing it for himself. Not much to look at it seems. With most of it in ruins and decaying or having been replaced with a factory of some sort.

"Home." He muttered. For some reason he thought it would it bring him fear but instead it brought a strange welcoming sense. One that he couldn't explain.

Turning to his father he looks at him. "So what do we do now? Any plans for getting Harou back will take careful planning because it's not often things get by him."

"Eager to get to the evil, are we? I like that."

And he liked so very, very little.

"I plan to crush Harou and his entire Network into such tiny, insignificant flecks of dust they won't even exist in this universe any more." Well, multiverse, but who was counting.

"And to do that, I will use..."

The intended object of doom placed before his protégé with typical dramatic flair.

"...this."

... a banana?

Six blinked as he looked at his father wondering if he was daft in the head. How does one attack with a banana? Was he supposed to make everyone slip on the peel?

"A banana?"

Six guessed he could figure out how to make it work. He had already proved he could make weapons out of things. Just give him some time.

"Ah, it looks like a banana. What it actually does is open a black hole into oblivion."

No wonder bananas were so expensive at the grocery store these days.

"You, my clever one, will go to the heart of Harou's hideout and trigger it, sucking both him and his collection of stooges into nothingness."

A beautiful image. Let's dwell on that for a moment. But there was one key detail, "Of course, I have a way to prevent you going down with them."

Edit | Delete

by Six 5 months ago

"You better." Six narrows his eyes. Although his father was treating him nicely, he wasn't stupid and knew the drake was still dangerous. For a brief second his eyes wandered to where he would land a bite if Negaduck tried anything.

I'll make sure you don't have any more kids....

He was trying to prevent a snarl from forming while thinking about the possibility of being betrayed.

"How do I active it?" As he pushed the thoughts aside.

by Negaduck 5 months ago

Fortunately Negaduck had been too busy prepping a demonstration space to notice where the duckling had been staring. Weird kid.

"It's a banana, how do you think you trigger it?!" Patience, not one of his strong points.

"Here!"

And, beginning to peel it, the flesh of the 'fruit' burned a blinding white. Suddenly the very fabric of the Negaverse began to pull towards it, unstoppably drawn towards its doom.

He snapped it shut.

"Do NOT muck around with it." Binding the top closed with a strand of duct tape. Because you know duct tape holds the universe together... "Peel it fully only when everything is in place. Once its opened completely there is nothing that can be done to stop it."

Handing it over, then stopping, and holding it just out of reach. "Think you can handle that?"

You'd better. Bananas like this don't grow on trees.

Edit | Delete

by Six 5 months ago

"I can handle it." Six says as he stares at the banana. The wheels were already turning in his head about how he could get into the base.

It would be easy. He could hide the banana in a basket with other fruits and present it as a gift. Harou would accept it as one tradition of gift giving from his native lands involved fruits. He would believe it was a normal banana.

He'll peel it to eat it and get sucked in.

"Good." The fearsome fruit passed over. He had no cause to doubt the boy. He had seen his tenacity first hand. How convenient it wasn't currently being channeled at him.

"The vortex will peter out and close over on its own within a minute. Long enough to swallow the whole damn lot of them. You though, you don't want to be anywhere near that."

Time for 'gift' two.

"Wear this." A black, shining band with a slit of LEDs to encircle one wrist. Hopefully not too collar-like. "Tap the front panel three times quickly and it will bring you home."

At least they weren't glittery red heels.

"It only has one – ONE – charge. Use it before you're ready, and I'll deem you a lost cause. You hear me?"

No fun being lost. Particularly in oblivion. I know.

Edit | Delete

by Six 5 months ago

"I see." Six took the band and wondered if he could trust Negaduck. He'll go with his plan of hiding the banana with some other fruit and leave before Harou peels it just in case.

"Father." He walks up to Negaduck and looks up at him cutely. The puppy face. "I'll make sure to make you proud." Then he drops that cute expression and bites him hard.

"Consider that my way of saying I love you."

But not really. You're still a fish breath jerkface, dad.

Delete

by Negaduck 5 months ago

The bite hit air. What, did Six really think the puppy face would draw his father in? It expelled him immediately like the smell of fresh cut roses or happiness.

Close, though.

"You little up-start!" Smack directed upside the head. "What did I tell you about the 'F' word? I DON'T want to hear it."

Snarling, and making sure to pay extra attention to where those teeth were pointing, he jabbed towards the door.

"Now get going or I'll say 'I love you' with a five tonne spike!"

by Six 5 months ago

Six took the smack but did not cry. He stood there staring at him feeling a snarl to begin to form as the urge to bite him again and cause bodily harm began to raise farther. His neck feathers started to bristle but he flatten them.

"Yes, father."

He said in a flat tone before heading towards the door. He felt his stomach growl and bite at him with hunger. Maybe he could steal some fish before heading back to the Normal verse to fill his belly. He did see a fish cannery nearby when he had taken a view of the area from the tower.

"RRRRRGHgggghhhhhh..."

Throttling motions at the air where Six once stood. Could not STAND that kid. To be fair, Negaduck couldn't stand any kids. Or anyone else generally.

Smoothing out his hat like it would smooth out his fiery temper, he wandered to a computer tower by the side. "Not long now..."

One button and a blip popped up on an onscreen map. The strap had a tracker. Not maliciously – oh never maliciously – he just needed to know how his little charge was progressing. Had to schedule a cross dimensional gloat at the most theatrical time...

Edit | Delete

by Six 5 months ago

After having his fill of fish, which consisted of consuming an entire tuna, Six returned to the Normal verse. He went through the portal they used just earlier.

First things first was hiding the banana among other fruit that he had of course had stolen once he was back in familiar territory. He repaired the peel because duct tape would be suspicious.

He can't believe he decided to go to Negaduck for this. But then maybe earning his father's trust would make it easier to deal with him later. Harou needed to be taught a lesson. It was his fault the psychotic drake knew of him and had hurt him. All because the Network Leader had decided to flirt with the demoness.

It was sad. Six had liked Malicia up until he found out that she was with his father and the kind of danger she brought because of it. Maybe if he was lucky, she would be seeing Harou now and both could be sent to oblivion. Those thoughts made his blood run ice cold. He had been feeling like a darkness was gripping him since his very first visit to the Negaverse. Maybe he really was the bad duck and becoming more like his father like everyone feared.

Six knew the tunnels in the Network's home base all too well. It didn't matter if it was pitch dark. He had learned the layout from Harou. He didn't meet anyone along the way that would stop him. Apparently Harou had ordered to let him pass if Six should return. This was all too easy as far as he was concerned.

It was time to put on the puppy face....

((OOOC: Figured this was a good moment for Mal and Harou to transition in.))

Little did Negaduck know (or perhaps he did -- hard to tell with all those tracking devices), Malicia had once again found her way back to Kamo Network, and specifically to Harou's personal chambers.

But there would be no booty call today. With two of her children in tow, she had sat down to discuss the subject of joint-custody -- only after a rather heated conversation that nearly came to blows between both parents.

Somehow, the topic had turned to Six.

"He clearly wasn't all that attached to you if he just decided to up and leave without notice." She shrugged nonchalantly. Mal wasn't terribly fond of Six anymore. The ungrateful brat had turned on her as well, despite her feeding and sheltering him.

Not to mention, her little trip to the future with Lilly had revealed just how incipiently annoying he would become in his adult years. For now, she held off on mentioning that part to Harou... or the fact that their son would also be active in St. Canard.

"After all I did for him and this is how he thanks me. All those long nights comforting him when he was sick or had nightmares. Giving him a place to live, food, clothing, and care." Harou says with a frown.

Quite frankly it hurt. The duckling would be dead if he hadn't come and found him in the lab when it was raided. Harou did a lot for him and now was taking the blame for something he did not predict nor control.

"I suppose he is like his father."

They were going to find out just how much like his father Six was becoming.

Six made his way down the halls that led to the private quarters in the base. He had been greeted by several members along the way. Pity, that they would all soon be lost in the void of oblivion. He merely smiled but it was not genuine as there was nothing but coldness behind it.

He paused before Harou's door to get himself ready and make sure all of the fruit was in its proper place. He had made sure the banana was one of the last pieces in the basket and that it was slightly hidden so that Harou would have to go through the others first before getting to it. He checked the device Negaduck had given him to see if it was still in working order. The lights appeared to be on but he still didn't quite trust it. Hence the reason on making sure the banana wasn't the first thing Harou tries to eat. That is why he planned on leaving as soon as he gave Harou the fruit. He had an excuse. He'll ask for an assignment and get to it right away to prove he was still loyal.

Putting on the puppy face, he knocked on the door and waited.

"Screeeeee!" The demonling stood on the opposite side of the door, his back arched and feathers puffed out, something akin to an infuriated feline.

"Settle down, darling." Mal coaxed her son as she rocked her baby girl to sleep. "It's just one of Harou's goons paying a visit. Don't wake your sister, she's finally napping."

by Harou 4 months ago

Harou went to the door after gently nudging the demonling to move so that whoever was at the door didn't get pounced. He opened it and a look of shock came to his face.

"What?"

It was unbelievable. He came back. He thought he was gone for good yet there he was standing there.

"Six!"

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

"Six." A less than enthusiastic reaction from Mal.

Gosh, what a coincidence that you're showing your face all of a sudden. Almost too coincidental.

The demonling didn't pounce, but his eyes locked onto Six as a low rumble emitted from his throat.

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

Although he had the puppy face on and smiled, deep down he was angry. How dare Harou be happy after what he did? After breaking the promise. He was holding back the urge to bite the dark feathered drake.

"Hi!"

He said in his raspy voice lacing it with fake happiness.

"I brought you a gift." He grins. "I'm sorry for running away and worrying you."

Lies...

by Harou 4 months ago

"Oh? You did?" Harou notes the basket of fruit. "Thank you." He took it from him and went to set it on the table in the little kitchen. "Oh. My favorites."

He returns to Six and hugs him. Harou was unaware of the act Six was putting on. He was happy to see him again after being worried.

"I've missed you. Everyone has been looking for you and couldn't find you. I thought something happened to you. But you're here now."

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

"I'm fine." Six says. "A nice lady took care of me for awhile."

She'd hate me now.

He could feel his feathers starting to bristle a bit from being hugged but he had to keep his cool. No sense in risking everything. So he just smiled like nothing was wrong. He noted Malicia was there as well.

Perfect.

That smile widen.

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

"Gee, how touching."

Mal had approached from behind, still holding her daughter snug against her body. She wasn't even trying to hide her displeasure at the sight of Six, intruding upon this little 'family' moment.

Her son, however, had gone straight for the basket. Pouncing on top of it, he began to attack the fruits. The banana, still sitting at the bottom, seemed safe for now as he gnawed at a pineapple. The basket itself was moving dangerously close to the edge of the table, however...

by Harou 4 months ago

"Hey now." Harou heard the noise behind him as his son was attacking the fruit. "You'll make a mess." He let go of Six and went back into the kitchen.

He plucked the little demonling from the pineapple. "Don't eat it all. Some of that is mine. Let me slice the pineapple for you."

He didn't think his son would take to fruit after being told he ate entire cows. He moved the basket to the middle of the table and pulled the pineapple out to slice it into thin slices.

"It's easier to eat now." He put the slices onto a plate and set it out for the demonling.

Safe for the moment.

by Six 4 months ago

When he saw the demonling attacking the fruit, he nearly lost his composure. That fruit basket was close to falling off the table and spoiling his plans if the banana came open when hitting the floor. He only sighed in relief when Harou went over to deal with the demonling.

That winged brat almost ruined it.

Six remained in the doorway while watching them.

"Harou. I would like to start working again. Is there any assignments that need to be done?" He needed to leave as soon as possible.

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

The demonling sniffed at the cut-up pineapple and then immediately whapped it off the table, sending the pieces flying in all directions. Well, now I don't want it when it looks like that!

Mal, meanwhile, hadn't bought into Six's sudden reappearance and was watching him carefully. She could smell a double-cross from a mile away -- sort of comes with years of having the worst double-crosser of them all living under your roof.

But she couldn't quite place a claw on what Six was up to.

by Harou 4 months ago

Harou sighed deeply after seeing his son shove the plate off the table creating a mess. He started to go and clean it up when he heard Six asking about assignments.

"There are some. You would have to get the directions on where to go from the files." He says. "But are you sure you want to do it right now? Don't you want to rest and maybe eat first? You just got here."

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

"If I do it now and get it over with, then we'll have more time together." Six says. "I want to prove I'm still loyal."

Except that he wasn't loyal.

Six noticed Malicia watching him. He was getting the feeling she was onto him so leaving as soon as possible would be great. Before she figured out what he was doing. He didn't want her ruining his plans either. Especially, since he wanted her gone as well.

Splort!

That was the sound a peach makes when hurled with super-demonling strength directly at Six's face.

Evidently, Harou and Mal's son wanted him gone as well. He took to the air, flapping around the room in circles, growling and screeching.

This, of course, woke up his sister, who began to cry. On the bright side, this distracted the demonness from Six, as her attention went back to comforting and rocking the baby.

Delete

by Harou 4 months ago

"Hey! That was not very nice!" Harou scolded his son. He went over to Six to look at him to make sure he was alright. "Let me see."

He sighed deeply that his daughter was upset now. "Stop it. You're scaring your sister."

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

"I'm fine." Six rubbed his bill after taking a peach to the face. He growled a little at the flying demonling. "I should go and come back later when they're gone."

You'll be gone alright.

He stepped away from Harou. He felt a little blood coming from his nostrils. The babies and getting hurt would be an excuse to leave.

"I'll go see Ping about this."

by Malicia 4 months ago

Mal was finding it hard to hide her amusement, and encouraged her son to sit with her while she settled the baby. She gave him an affectionate scratch under the chin. "Help me calm your sister."

The demonling nuzzled in close to his sister, letting out a reassuring trill. Slowly, his sister's cries died down, until finally she was calm again.

Yes, do leave us Six. We're trying to have a family moment here.

by Harou 4 months ago

After Six had left, Harou went back into the kitchen to finish cleaning up the pineapple. He rooted through the basket to see what fruit had been left when he found a banana tucked away near the bottom of the basket.

"Oh. A banana. I love bananas."

How thoughtful. Well, it would be if it wasn't the world sucking variety.

He started to peel the banana that strangely came apart easily since it appeared to have been partially peeled already. But even more strange was that it suddenly glowed brightly.

"What the hell?!"

Harou threw it at the ground. He stared in horror for a moment. Six had betrayed him and now they were in danger.

"Malicia! Get the kids out of here!" He yells as banana had started drawing everything around it into it. He tried hooking his claws into something to hang on but the pull was too great.

Delete

by Negaduck 4 months ago

Not seconds after that panicked cry, every screen in the vicinity lit up. With a very familiar smug face.

"I'm sorry to tell you.."

He wasn't, of course.

"This is really going to suck."

The only thing worse than being pulled into an inescapable vortex of impending doom. NEGAPUNS.

The problem with drinking in a rival's demise, however, was that it took your attention off other things. Like one's long time consort and children being in the same room.

Minor detail, right?

by Malicia 4 months ago

Mal, who was still distracted with feeding her daughter, was alerted not by Harou's panicking, but by the familiar low rumble of Negs.

Oh shit, a Negapun. Nothing good EVER proceeds a Negapun.

Sure enough, she could already feel the atmosphere warping around them and her body was pulled inwards.

The last thing that would be heard as the growing hole devoured everyone and everything, was a furious screech.

"YOU MORON!!!!!"

by Negaduck 4 months ago

It was only then that his gaze snapped to mother and babies. You know, because there was nothing like a 'I am going to castrate you' screech to get his attention.

"MALICIA!"

Shock, panic, anger. Otherwise known as his 'this is not part of the plan' face.

"What in the name of festering corpses are you doing her---"

Too late. The banana had had its fill and, with a huge WOOOSH of rushing wind, the portal snapped shut, leaving nothing but empty earth for miles around.

Whoops?

Edit | Delete

by Harou 4 months ago

"WHEN I GET OUT OF HERE YOU ARE DEAD! YOU HEAR ME! DEAD!" Harou snarls deeply. Doesn't matter if he's with Malicia or not. He spared the little dirt ball for long enough. As far as he was concerned, he was going to skin him alive and use his hide as a throw rug.

"HEAR ME! DEAD!"

Was the last words before he vanished.

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

It was dark. There was silence. Dead silence.

Then.

"Well, I hope you learned your lesson, Harou. This is why we do not accept strange baskets of phallic-shaped food from estranged adopted children."

That was Mal, who was currently floating next to the enraged leader in their voidless surroundings. Her daughter was still folded safely in her arms, and her son had latched on to her tail to keep from drifting off.

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

"That lying rat!" Came a hiss in the dark.

Six had barely gotten down the hall when Harou had opened that banana. Furthermore, he found out the device was just a Fitbit. A device that just measured steps taken and calories burned. But he knew he couldn't trust his father and expected t. He just wished Harou wasn't hungry until he had gotten out.

He smashed the device in his hand imagining it being Negaduck's neck.

by Harou 4 months ago

"Six..." Harou frowns. He was so disappointed after having been so happy to see him again.

The duckling would never forgive him and it was clear that he was becoming more like his father. Maybe some of his people had been right. He wasn't to be trusted even if he was young.

Now Harou was trapped in a dark void where he could only hear voices. He had no idea how they were going to escape.

"Are the little ones safe?" He asks blindly. He only had a general idea of where Malicia was judging from the direction her voice was coming from.

by Malicia 4 months ago

On cue, a flame erupted from Mal's finger, acting as a make-shift torch.

"They're fine for now." Surprisingly calm considering their dire situation.

"But you won't be." A scathing glare at Six. "You might be Negaduck's son, but you clearly didn't inherit ANY of his intelligence whatsoever. You honestly believed that he wouldn't betray you? Really, how stupid do you have to be?"

Attention back to Harou now.

"Here, hold this." Their baby daughter thrust into his arms. She began rummaging around in her cleavage.

"I know I keep it in here somewhere for emergencies like this..." She fished out a cornucopia of objects: A melted candy bar, condoms, a kazoo, a pair of scissors... all of which floated around the group.

"Ah, here we are!"

Clutching a small pocket-sized book in her hands. "My emergency spellbook. Never leave home without it. It'll take a bit of time, but I'm sure I can find a spell that'll get us out of this mess."

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

"I knew he would. I'm not stupid." Six hisses. Actually his IQ was greater than his father's but we won't get into that. He was only angry because he knew his father couldn't be trusted. "But Harou just had to be hungry right now." He huffed. Yeah. It was the dark drake's fault for peeling the banana.

But Negaduck had shown him a way into the Negaverse. If he got out of the void he would return it. After all, there was a tower full of goodies he could raid and have fun with. He had seen the things that was stored there. Now that there was light thanks to Malicia, he could see them and the remains of the Fitbit. He noted there appeared to be a part that did not belong to it. He grabbed the scissors to snip it off.

"I know where I can find you, father." He sneered as he looked at what he knew was a tracking device.

by Harou 4 months ago

"So this is yet another plan by Negaduck." Harou growls. "Why am I not surprised?"

But he wasn't even going to try to once again prove that the drake was a threat since it would lead to yet another argument with Malicia since she was delusional about him. Of course all blame was shifted to Six. An angry yet impressionable young drake.

"Six...Why?" He looks at the duckling as they floated there feeling a bit hurt.

But then the duckling was right. Being with her brought all of this. Now he was regretting it.

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

"If you knew he would, why are you stuck here with us?" No patience for the brat whatsoever. "Unless that too was part of your plan."

Still fiddling with the spellbook, she narrowed her eyes at Harou. He didn't even have to finish that sentence; it was all in his tone.

"And explain to me, Harou, how Six was able to smuggle a black-hole triggering weapon of mass destruction straight into the heart of your compound. You lead some sort of massive technological militia... don't you do weapon checks? Pick up on energy signatures?"

Y'all can point the finger at Negs as much as you want, but what'll be the excuse when it's someone else.

by Six 4 months ago

"Harou ruined my plan." Six hisses. "Both of you needed to be punished." He wasn't fond of her either now. "You bring danger by attracting my father."

He bristles as he was growing more angry. He was stuck with two people he hated. They both allowed Negaduck to come and get them all caught. Get him trapped and tortured by him. He still hadn't forgotten about the needles that his father had jammed into his body. All the pain it caused.

"I hate you..."

Delete

by Harou 4 months ago

"Six, I'm sorry. I broke the promise. But how was I supposed to know what was going to happen? Things happen that we can't control." Harou sighs deeply.

"Nothing I say or do will change things. All I can ask is for is forgiveness." He looks down at the baby in his arms. "And that applies to you too, Malicia." As he looks at her for a moment before nuzzling the baby.

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

"Stop being an idiot!" This was directed at Six, not Harou (a nice change of pace). "You honestly think that we're to blame? Are you really that much of an imbecile?"

She floated closer to the duckling, staring him down with an impatient snarl.

"Let me make one thing clear to you: If Negaduck sees something he wants, he'll find a way to get it. It doesn't matter if Harou had met me or not. Even if I had never followed Harou to his compound, you still would've met the same fate, because NEWS FLASH: The second Negaduck found out you were harvesting some sort of biological death-virus -- which, might I add, was because of YOU leaving your little computer unprotected for him to find -- he had his mind made up."

She jabbed him in the chest with a claw. "The only one you should be blaming is that laboratory for saddling you with a super-virus. They're the reason you were carrying it, and you're the reason Negaduck found out about it. Besides, it's because of Negaduck's extraction that you aren't still contagious -- you could've killed millions."

Claw now pointed in Harou's direction. "The only thing he needs to be sorry about is bothering with such an ungrateful brat who clearly has no appreciation for the person who bothered to rescue, feed, and cloth him!"

And I gave you tuna. TUNA, DAMMIT.

by Six 4 months ago

"Don't touch me!" Six glares at her when she jabbed him in the chest. He honestly looked ready to cry. Despite everything, he was still just a child with only a child's understanding of the world. He was frustrated. It seemed no matter where he went there was people that wanted to hurt him in his mind.

"Leave me alone.."

Now being reminded of the lab and the illness just brought back painful memories. Tears started to fall as he turned away from them.

"Both of you will just hurt me like everyone else does."

by Harou 4 months ago

Harou sighs deeply. "Look. Fighting each other isn't going to get us out of this mess. So we better stick together and figure out how to get out of here. We've already caused each other enough pain. Let's just put it in the past and move on."

He didn't like all of the fighting. It was getting them nowhere and just causing an even bigger rift between them. Plus, he was concerned about the babies becoming upset.

Harou moved over to Six. "It's alright. Calm down. No one is going to hurt you." He reached out to rub the duckling's back while still holding onto his daughter.

Delete

by Malicia 4 months ago

"PUT IT BEHIND US?!" She roared.

"NO. YOU LISTEN TO ME." Now she was rounding on Harou. "You JUST raked me through the coals, telling me I was a horrible mother because I let Negaduck near our children! You just got through telling me you'll do EVERYTHING to protect them! And then literally minutes later you let Six into the room, and he saw our children. He still activated the black hole despite knowing the babies were there. He had NO problem harming THEM, because he's angry at US. And your response is to APOLOGIZE TO HIM, and 'put it behind us?!'"

She snagged her daughter from Harou's arms and pushed herself off him with her back legs to place distance between them.

"You say I'm the crazy, delusional one who will get my children killed? When this psychopath willingly sucks them into Oblivion? And your response is to fawn over him and kiss his little ass because he sheds a few tears?"

She shook her head. "I refuse to help him escape. He can rot in here for the rest of eternity. I'm finding my own way out, with or without you!"

This would normally be the part where she'd exit dramatically but well... not exactly anywhere to exit to. So instead she settled for just sort of floating further away.

Delete

by Six 4 months ago

"I didn't activate the black hole. Harou did." Six frowns. "It's activated by peeling the banana." He looks at her. "I wasn't expecting you or babies to be there. I don't hurt babies."

He rubs his eyes as he sniffs. "Harou's right. We should stop fighting. I'm sorry. I was angry and lashed out. I'll make it right."

He looks around in the darkness but couldn't see anything at all except blackness. He had no idea if the space here was small or stretched on forever.

"If we're inside a banana there must be a seam where the peel comes together. Negaduck said it seals back up when it's done. But I don't know if this goes on forever. It wouldn't hurt trying to float in the direction of what would be a wall."

"I got us here. I was the one that opened the banana. Not Six." Harou sighs. "I still stand by my word. I will protect my children. But Six did not harm us physically. We're still in one piece. We're just trapped. It was unfortunate that you just happened to be there when I opened it."

However he turns to Six. "If you try to harm us or do something like this again, I will kill you." He growls. "Do not let Negaduck or the darkness corrupt your mind. You do not have to live that life or what they tried to train you to do at the lab. That is wrong. You're doing what you believe we have done to you. Hurt us. Even if it's not physical, it's still hurting us."

"Paint me a monster for over acting or Six for being angry and led astray all you want, Malicia. But let me remind you, you are no saint. You willingly tried to hurt babies yourself. I saw it all over the news how you dangled little babies over hot lava threatening to burn them alive. Or how about the splitting incident? The one half of you harmed a bus full of orphans."

Harou frowns. "Yet I didn't condemn you for it like you are doing to us. In fact. I clearly remember comforting you when you came to me." He crosses his arms. "There's this thing called forgiveness. But maybe I was wrong for being so forgiving in the face of such horrendous crimes. Since you aren't willing to give it back. And here I was considering forgiving you for allowing them to be near Negaduck.."

"By your logic, Harou, you should be forgiving Negaduck. After all, he's committed horrendous crimes too. Clearly we should just forgive and forget!" She spat back sarcastically. Really, had he completely lost his bloody mind? It was blatantly clear that Six had seen the kids -- he looked straight at them. And STILL he walked away, knowing that Harou would activate that banana.

You cry all the fake crocodile tears you want kid, I'll never buy it.

"I'll say exactly what you said to me earlier, Harou: If anything happens to our children because of your own delusional views about Six, then I will hunt you down, remove each of your robotic limbs, and shove them so far up your rectum they'll burst through your stomach like a stripper out of a comically-sized birthday cake."

Okay, not exactly what Harou said. I might be getting creative with that last part.

"Now then." Sudden professional no-nonsense tone as she set to work on their escape. "If we are indeed stuck inside a banana." There's a dirty joke in there somewhere. "Then there could be an exit. But I have doubts about walls, given this is likely another dimension. You have to think outside the dimensional box."

Flip-flip. "I think I have a black hole spell in here somewhere... I might be able create a sort of counter-hole", oh my god, so many potential jokes, "that'll neutralize this dimension and send us back."

"But what if that hole ends up sucking us in?" Six asks. "Then we'll be stuck in some other place."

He looks around again and scratches his head. They were just floating there meaning they already had came out somewhere after being sucked in.

"If we're in another dimension can't you just teleport us out or use a portal?"

Since he had a visit to the Negaverse, he now knew the existence of dimensional portals.

"Maybe one day I will. You never know. It would depend on certain things." Harou huffed. "I will not let anything happen to the babies. I swear on my life on that."

He ignored her threat. And he would defend the babies from harm even at the cost of his life.

The problem with not being able to forgive Negaduck was that he had no potential to be redeemable. Six and Malicia seemed to have some qualities that might allow them to redeem themselves if they were pushed into the right direction. It might be difficult but the possibility might exist. At least that's what he thought. Although as much as he hated Negaduck, Harou would admit he sort of pitied him after reading in Six's lab files about the things called "negatrons". He had a feeling Negaduck was born a slave to his own programmed nature.

I suppose I could forgive him one day if he was born into the destructive looping path he is trapped in caused by the negatrons. But I won't do it out of kindness. Only out of pity and the understanding that he is a very ill drake that cannot be cured to what is almost like an incurable genetic disease.

Harou was jarred out of his thoughts when Six spoke. He looks over at Malicia. "Six might be on to something. Negaduck is from another dimension and he travels through a portal correct? Perhaps if we found out where we are, then maybe we can find a portal out or create one between this world and ours. If that is possible."

Looking over at Six now. "I assume Negaduck told you something about that banana before he gave it to you. Did he tell you what sort of qualities it had? How it worked?" Might as well use the kid for something if she was gonna be stuck in here with him.

Meanwhile, her son had grown bored with floating around and had used his wings to propel him forward in the void, where he was nearing Harou and Six now. He let out a low growl at Six -- he smelled like his half-siblings. Therefore, he was a threat. The other one -- the big dark one, not so much. Though he still seemed unsure of his nature. After all, he had just witnessed his mother become very upset and emotional because of the Dark One... but now she seemed calm, and even let the Dark One hold Little Sister.

Cassi stirred in Mal's arms as she juggled the baby and the book. "There's different types of portals and teleportation spells." She explained. "And their efficacy relies on the nature of what we're dealing with in here."

"He said it opens a blackhole to oblivion. You peel the banana, it glows, and then sucks everything in. It stops after awhile and then closes." Six says. "But that's all he told me."

He saw the little one approaching them with a sour face and the growl so he stuck his tongue out at him. But not out of malicious intent. He made a funny face afterwards as if to say 'don't be grumpy'.

"We're not working with much then it seems. But I suppose we still have to try something." Harou pauses. "Hello, little one."

He now noticed the baby flying towards them as they were talking. Well, the best he could. The demonling almost blended in with the darkness of the area.

"Oblivion?!"

Okay, this could be worse than I thought.

"There is a way to escape Oblivion. It's been done before. But it's going to be... complicated."

"Lucifer, don't wander too far from mommy." She reprimanded the little one, not even realizing she called him by the name he hadn't yet received -- at least, in this time frame.

The demonling in question turned his attention to Harou first, sniffing at him curiously. The Dark One does not seem too threatening right now. But he makes Mother tense, I wonder why.

"That's what he said." Six says as he floats closer to her. He was curious about the whole portal thing. He seemed to forget that he was angry with them. Perhaps the violent meltdown had reset his brain and he was no longer feeling those feelings anymore.

He tilts his head when he spots the baby girl that was stirring in her arms. "Does she have a name?"

"Lucifer?" Harou blinked. "Is that his name?" He looks at his son. "Seems fitting."

After all, he looked like a little devil with the fangs and the spade tail. All he needed was little horns.

"Don't wander too far, son. Don't want you to get lost in the dark here."

They would never find him if he did wander off. The black feathers would make him nearly invisible if he wandered too far from the light made by Malicia's make shift torch. And he was so small. So that would make it hard as well.

"Worgwa?" Lucifer tilted his head curiously, responding to Harou's words. Although, evidently, not capable of speaking in full English yet. He moved closer to Harou until he was perched on the larger drake's shoulder, and began sniffing at him. Then his clothing. Maybe he has more food on him...

Mal was pouring over a particular page in the spell-book, which looked like a rather odd collection of nonsensical symbols and gibberish. She didn't look up at Six when she spoke. "Not yet, she'll get one eventually."

The baby in question stared back at Six with her bright yellow eyes. Lacking the same level of 'danger sense' as Lucifer, she merely giggled up at him.

"Hmm..." Mal murmured to herself. "I could try this one, I suppose."

"She should have a pretty name then." Six was still looking at her. When she giggled at him he smiled. Then he made silly faces again much like he had tried with Lucifer to get her to giggle more.

"You're cute."

"I'm afraid I don't have anymore food." Harou says and makes a face. Those claws were digging into him. He cooed to him and reached up to scratch under his chin.

He sighed a little and was feeling hungry himself. "We'll be home soon and I can make you a big pot of noodles and beef."

It would probably be a mess, but what little kid didn't like playing with noodles while eating them?

For those with perverted minds, that was not an innuendo.

"Prrrrrrl" He lifted his chin and angled it so Harou was hitting the best spot. Ah, that feels nice.

Cassi continued to giggle and clap her hands. Suddenly Mal's tail wrapped around her, gently lifting her from the demonness' arm, freeing her hands. Not a typical maneuver, but the severe lack of gravity was useful in this instance.

"Okay, I'm going to attempt a warp spell first." She explained.
"See if I can reverse the suction so that it'll spit us back out."
